GCTV serves off-campus groups as well as College

by Pattie Cinelli

Gallaudet College Television (GCTV) has expanded its focus this year to include an emphasis on the development of programs and requests which serve the needs of off-campus groups as well as the Gallaudet community.

While GCTV will continue to devote its major efforts to producing programs for the Gallaudet community, GCTV Director Tom Klagholz said that "in most instances these programs have an audience beyond the campus and that by building awareness, the distribution potential of our work can be increased." For example, one project being developed in conjunction with the Department of Audiology and the Instructional Development and Evaluation Center, deals with speechreading. It involves the modification of existing test materials for use with deaf people. While these programs are intended for use within the Department of Audiology, the potential exists for distribution to other speech centers across the country.

An example of an entertainment program which possesses similar potential is the Gallaudet College Theatre Arts Department's production of "The Elephant Man." While this program meets a definite need of the campus community, it can also meet the needs and desires of a national community through vehicles such as cable companies, satellite networks, or videotape shuttles to other schools for the deaf through the Gallaudet Library.

John Scott, director of Marketing and Program Development for College Educational Resources, said for the last year and a half, as part of his responsibilities, he has been to look seriously at the potential cable television holds for distribution of Gallaudet programming. He has been investigating what the College currently has available for distribution. "Cable affords us the opportunity to distribute programs that are being produced initially for on-campus use," Scott explained. For example, Warner Amex Cable Company specifically requested 10 programs from Gallaudet.

DRCC discusses plans for year

by Mike Kaika

The Deafness Related Concerns Council held its first meeting of the academic year Sept. 16 to plan its agenda for this semester and to discuss the status of two DRCC-appointed task force reports on Employment of Deaf Persons at Gallaudet and Deaf Faculty Employment.

The DRCC is composed of six deaf persons from the College and Pre-College along with Special Assistant to the President Merv Garretson, who serves as an ex-officio member.

Chairperson Ausma Smits brought the members up-to-date on reports which have been and will be submitted to President Edward C. Merrill, Jr.

The DRCC submitted a 30-page report on Orientation to Deafness and Deaf People to Merrill and members of Central Administration this past June for their consideration. The DRCC expects to receive their reactions to the report soon. Additionally, a copy of this report was sent to every budget unit head or department on campus to share with employees. Every employee is encouraged to review the report.

Work on the report began when the DRCC appointed a task force in the fall of 1980 to evaluate existing orientation materials and to recommend ways to implement a meaningful and structure orientation program for all new employees. New employees do attend an orientation program, but the DRCC felt it was generally sporadic and loosely administered. Although a survey response indicated that a reasonably adequate job had been done, DRCC felt there was a need to extend the scope of the program, develop a meaningful orientation curriculum and aim for a more comprehensive orientation approach.

It was through the efforts of the task force that the first campus-wide team attempt was made to identify and evaluate available programs thoroughly and to consider the needs of new Gallaudet employees in relation to the College's institutional goals and clientele.

The report contained six recommendations. Among them is the suggestion to establish a position of full-time director for all orientation programs and that the person be experienced in planning programs and using resources effectively. Another recommendation was to es-

French culture comes to Gallaudet cable

French television programming—including first-run French movies, plays, French lessons, cordon bleu cooking and more—has come to Gallaudet.

Now you can turn your TV set at Gallaudet to Channel 8 cable showing of these French programs, which are captioned in English.

The acquisition of the French television programs for Gallaudet cable was made possible through John Scott, director of marketing and program development for College Educational Resources. The programs were prepared by TeleFrance U.S.A., a television service sponsored by the French government that is similar to Public Television here in the United States. The programs are produced in France and captioned in New York by a branch of TeleFrance.

Gallaudet is getting the taped programs free of charge as a service to the College. We already have a backlog, and until that backlog runs out, different programs will be aired continually from 3-11 p.m. each day.

After that, Gallaudet will get six hours of programming each week. The six hours of tapes will be repeated each day, six days a week. The College will soon be getting a monthly program guide, which will be publicized on the cable system.

Faculty and staff members are encouraged to request specific programs to be used in their classes or other activities here. To request a specific time for a program to be shown, you can contact the head end of the cable TV system here at x5931 voice or x5932 TDD. For more information about the French programs, contact John Scott, x5814.

Scott said he has also been talking with Cox Cable Company and Viacom.

However, Scott pointed out that Gallaudet does not only want to make programs for deaf people and about deafness available but wants to actively encourage the cable companies to use them. "We want to bring more recognition to Gallaudet and deaf awareness," said Scott. This can be done by also encouraging cable companies to caption programs they already have."

Scott said CER (of which GCTV is a part) is also exploring the possibilities of working on co-productions with outside groups on a specific program or series of programs which will provide additional programming for deaf persons by either using sign language within the program or by captioning the final product. For example, GCTV has worked with such groups as the Smithsonian Institution, WGBH-TV in Boston and the Howard University Cancer Center.

Database information

Some computer databases that are not as well-known as other databases might still be helpful in locating deafness-related materials. It is true that ERIC and Exceptional Children Educational Resources (ECER) are now and will probably remain the leaders in pinpointing information on deafness, educational or otherwise. But other databases can sometimes locate quality information, too.

School Practices Information File (SPIF) contains information on educational practices, programs and materials currently in operation or use. Specific information includes titles, authors, contact people, grade levels, target audiences, publishers, availability and years of publication/operation. Entries may refer to programs, materials or both. If information is not specifically deafness-related, it might still be useful.

Resources in Vocational Education (RIVE) is similar to SPIF and is not so strictly vocational that it could not be useful at a liberal arts institution. Two examples present teaching the use of business computers in high schools and colleges and teaching career education in elementary and secondary schools. RIVE covers ongoing and recently completed research and development projects in vocational education, and their resulting products and reports. It contains more than 5,000 records from 1976 to date and is updated quarterly.

None of us may be as familiar with all databases as we are with ERIC and ECER, but we can explore and learn together.

NEA summer program

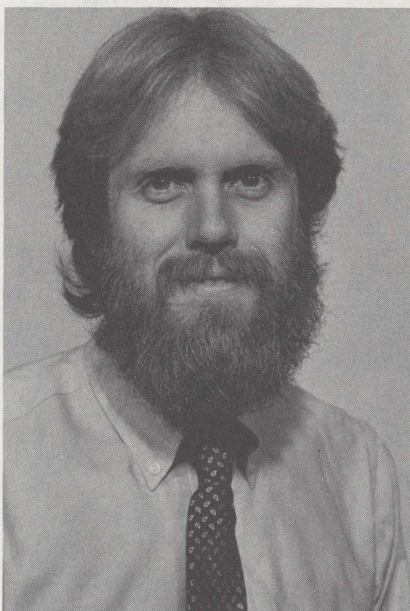

Friday, Oct. 1 is the deadline for college teachers to submit application to the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) summer 1983 stipend program.

Through this program, NEH provides $2,700 stipends to support two consecutive months of full-time study or research. These summer research projects must pertain to academic subjects in the humanities area.

Interested Gallaudet faculty members can contact Joe Neville at NEH, 724-0333, for more information.

Students taking Introduction to TV Broadcasting taught by Marin Allen of the Visual Media Department learn how to work TV cameras in the TV studio at MSSD.

John Scott, formerly the director of Art and Photography Services and the TV representative in College Educational Resources, is now the director of Marketing and Program Development for the same department. His job responsibilities include analyzing products created in all CER units for potential use for cable TV, colleges, museums, businesses and network television. Scott also was recently elected to the National Board of Directors for the National Federation of Local Cable Programmers which is headquartered in Washington, D.C. The organization provides information on a national level about TV programming needs to counties which are franchising, cable companies, libraries, colleges, universities and government.

Dentist has TDD

Steven Rattner, DDS, a graduate of the University of Maryland Dental School, has opened a dental practice in Eastgate Shoppers World, 10555 Greenbelt Road, Lanham, MD.

Rattner, who married 1980 Gallaudet graduate Tracy Ballan, is specializing in general dentistry and dentistry for handicapped persons. His TDD is 390-6552 and voice is 390-6550.

Gate closed

The Sixth Street gates will be temporarily closed between the hours of 2:30-4:30 p.m. daily. This action is due to problems caused by Hamilton Junior High School students shortcutting through the campus. If there are any questions or comments they may be addressed to the Department of Safety and Security.

given the College the go-ahead to market its resources. According to Scott, the emphasis will continue to be on providing services to deafness-related groups, but the permission does extend to providing support to commercial non-deafness related groups as long as Gallaudet maintains a competitive pricing for services rendered and as long as the proceeds are used to serve deaf individuals.

This past summer, the GCTV staff worked with the National Committee on Arts and the Handicapped on the production of "Moonrise," a videotape performance piece about disability expressed through dance. The piece, directed by Larry Ashley, has been shown in 12 different locations in Latin America as well as several other countries. Ashley also directed a 30-second public service announcement about Gallaudet which aired on WTTG-TV during the Muscular Dystrophy Telethon this past Labor Day. GCTV staff did studio and production work for the Appalachian Community Service Network, as well as for the Council of Economic Development. GCTV also completed "Deaf Before the Court," a program about Michael Chatoff, the first deaf lawyer to use a stenotypist and a computer system in the court. This permitted him to read what the Justices and other persons said. Chatoff argued the Amy Rowley case before the Supreme Court.

Under the direction of Sandy Maley, the GCTV staff produced a videotape, "Kids on the Block," about a training program on the use of puppets in education. Segments were also produced by GCTV under the direction of Jim Dellon for WGBH-TV in Boston for the ABC Captioned News on the Gallaudet College Linguistics Research Lab and on Deaf Awareness Day at Kings Dominion.

In addition to the above, GCTV is continuing to provide a complete line of services including the captioning of programs both edited and verbatim. Special emphasis will be placed this year on providing support to the Undergraduate Visual Media Program and the Graduate Educational Technology Program, which both use GCTV's facilities. Together with the students who are already working within the Television Unit, future interns and graduates of these programs will play an increasingly vital role in providing quality television programming for the deaf.

establish a planning committee to plan, implement and ascertain that Gallaudet orientation programs are both coordinated and effective.

Given the availability of resources that the College already possesses—both human and material—the DRCC believes that it is possible to begin implementing the recommendations during the spring of 1983 even under current financial constraints.

The DRCC will also be submitting another lengthy report on Employment of Deaf Persons at Gallaudet College to Central Administration at the end of this month. A task force was formed in 1980 to identify areas on campus where employment of deaf people was nonexistent or only minimal; to study the employment, recruitment and hiring practices as related to deaf persons; and to gather data as to exact numbers of deaf people employed at Gallaudet. The result of this effort is a detailed 38-page report with some 34 recommendations.

Another report by the DRCC which focuses entirely on deaf faculty employment is in the finishing stages and will be submitted to Central Administration before the end of this semester.

The DRCC also submitted a short report to President Merrill this summer bringing to his attention the difficulties in making TDD calls on campus, getting TDDs repaired within a reasonable time, personnel who have not been introduced to TDD devices and how to use them, and recommendations on how these difficulties can be corrected.

One of the suggestions in the TDD report is to establish a TDD repair service center on campus so that both time and cost can be reduced. The report indicated that during the 1981 calendar year, Gallaudet expended more than $25,000 on TDD repairs excluding postage and handling. Additionally, the repair process took anywhere from four weeks to two months.

The Purchasing Department, at the suggestion of Merrill, formed a committee to conduct a survey on what kinds of TDDs are preferred on campus, how many TDDs each department has, the frequency of use and other pertinent data. A questionnaire was distributed this summer and responses have been good. A tabulation and analysis of the questionnaire is expected to be completed and distributed to President Merrill and the DRCC around mid-October.

The DRCC meets monthly and the next meeting is Oct. 7. During the lunch period, from 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m., DRCC members will have lunch at the Alumni House. Members of the campus community are welcome to join them and share concerns, exchange information or find out more about the DRCC.

Tune your TV to the Gold Monkey

Unfortunately the program is not closed captioned yet as it is part of the new season's line up on ABC-TV this fall. But one of its regulars has a long record as an active supporter of disabled people's rights and a personal interest in achieving them.

Les Jankey plays the bartender in a wheelchair in "Tales of the Gold Monkey," an action drama set in the late 1930s. Stephen Collins stars as a danger-courting pilot who must deal with all sorts of Nazis and Japanese secret agents, not to mention the apes guarding a fabulous gold idol. Jankey says that much effort has been put into making the show authentic. His own wheelchair is even replaced by a vintage 1938 model. "Tales of a Gold Monkey" can be seen locally on WJLA-TV, Channel 7, Wednesdays at 8 p.m. It premiered Sept. 22.

Jankey, who serves on the Board of Directors of the Media Office of the California Governor's Office for Employment of the Handicapped and is a member of the Los Angeles City Council of the Handicapped, is a scriptwriter, publicist and actor as well as an activist in the civil rights movement for disabled individuals. If you catch the show and like Jankey's contribution to it, you might want to write to ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10019 or WJLA-TV, 4461 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington, DC 20008.

Eagles notch first win

by Mike Kaika

The MSSD Eagles, after losing the season's opener to Quantico 22-16, rebounded Friday, Sept. 17 and defeated Severn High School 14-13.

The Eagles were behind in the Severn game 13-6 with four minutes left in the game and Severn in possession of the ball. However, the Eagles recovered a fumble on their own 35 yard line and on the next play, Toselli Silvestri carried the pigskin to the one yard line. Rodney VanManen dived over the line but fumbled in the end-zone. Teammate Kevin Graves saw the loose ball and pounced on it for an MSSD touchdown. Silvestri barreled over for the two point conversion and Model led 14-13 with one minute left in the game.

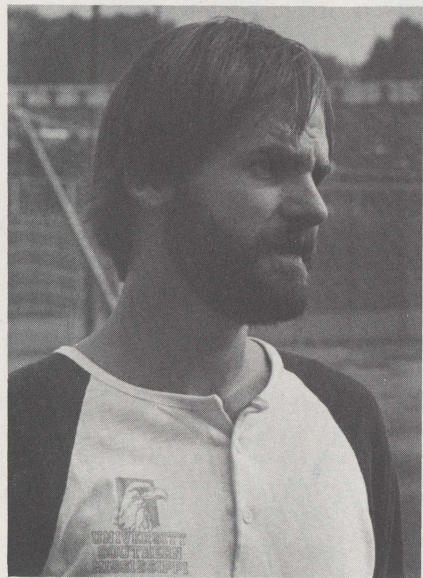

Other MSSD sports will be getting underway this week.

College soccer wins

The College soccer team started the season with its best foot forward by defeating Washington Bible 2-1. The Bison booters won their second game of the young season against Harford Community College 3-1.

The soccer team, under head coach Marty Minter, is aiming for its seventh consecutive winning season.

Results of other College sports will be reported in On the Green.

Nick Creekmore is Marty Minter's assistant soccer coach. Creekmore, who has an MA from Southern Mississippi and currently is working on his PhD at the University of Maryland, worked this past summer as a lifeguard at the Gallaudet pool.

Communication trounces student volleyball team

A volleyball team of faculty members from the School of Communication soundly trounced a team of students in a competition held Friday, Sept. 17. The faculty easily won the first two games of an intended three game match: 15-7 and 11-0. Mary Pat Wilson of Audiology must be commended for serving during the second shut-out game. Other stars of the team were Betty Colonos of Sign Communication and Bob Johnson of Linguistics.

According to Dean David Tweedie, the School of Communication challenged the students to the volleyball competition all in good fun. Although future games may be scheduled, right now the winners are reveling in their success and are in no hurry to put their winning status in jeopardy by playing again in the near future.

Volunteers needed at MSSD to offset budgetary restrictions

Congressional action has restricted the MSSD budget to the 1981 funding appropriation. Many of the services which allow MSSD to provide a more individualized program for students are no longer available.

Volunteers are needed in order that MSSD may continue to meet the specialized needs of its students. The following is a list of activities for which volunteer help is needed:

- Study hall assistance—Assistance in supervision and providing tutorial help as appropriate.
- Supervision of an after-school study hall—This study time will be mandatory for students who have cut a class or who are behind in homework assignments. Tutorial assistance as appropriate.

- Monitoring class attendance—Supervise student workers who collect attendance sheets for each period; record class attendance from these sheets and complete appropriate forms for follow-up action.

- Supervise dorm study time from 7-9 p.m.—This study time will be mandatory for students who are cutting classes and/or are behind in homework assignments. Tutorial assistance as appropriate.

- Assisting in Learning Resource Center—Answer phones, help check books in and out, recordkeeping, etc.

If you are interested in volunteering some of your time, please contact the Principal's Office, x5801. Your interest and support will be appreciated.

Among Ourselves

Linda Boyer and Jackie Maeder of the Instructional Development and Evaluation Center recently completed the design and delivery of a two-day workshop on curriculum development to representatives of schools in the northeast region. The workshop was held in White Plains, NY.

Rudy Gawlik, professor and Wilton McMillan, intern, from the Department of Counseling, co-directed a one-week counseling camp for 12 students from the Kentucky School for the Deaf Aug. 23-27. The program, called "Self-Help Week," was designed to improve the self-control and group living skills of the 12 high school boys who participated. The counseling camp was a joint effort of the Kentucky School and the Christian Appalachian Project and represents the collaboration of a state school with the private sector.

A number of people from Gallaudet will be participating in the convention of the New York State Association for Education of the Deaf scheduled for Oct. 6-8. On Oct. 7, the keynote address will be given by Robert Davila, vice president for Pre-College Programs. Also on that day, Max and Della Fitz-Gerald will give a presentation on sex education. Fitz-Gerald is a human sexuality specialist with Clinical and Support Services at MSSD. Rudy Gawlik of the Department of Counseling will present a session on counseling with the deaf. The concluding session of the conference on Oct. 8 will be presented by Bernard Bragg of the Alumni and Public Relations Office.
